Expanding Access: New Centers Opened in 2024

In 2024, ABS Kids expanded its reach by opening new centers in North Carolina, South Carolina, and Tennessee, bringing essential autism services to more families and communities.

New Center Openings:

- North Carolina - Garner, Holly Springs, Union County
- South Carolina - Columbia, Fort Mill, Greenville, Rock Hill
- Tennessee - Gallatin, Murfreesboro, Smyrna

These centers provide much-needed autism evaluations, ABA therapy, and life skills programs, ensuring more children receive timely, high-quality care. Families in these areas now have greater access to essential services, reducing wait times and supporting learners in reaching critical milestones.

We're proud of the impact these new centers are already making and look forward to further expanding our services in 2025.

My WOW this week happened with my non verbal kiddo on Monday. My kiddo has these wooden alphabet letters and as I started to pick them up, he started naming and sounding the letters I would hold!! 😊 My kiddo has never done this before, mom and I were so surprised! My kiddo also started repeating words we said and was able to pronounce all the syllables in Doctor! He is doing so amazing and we are all so very proud of his efforts to talk!

I have had my patient for almost a year now and he has always been excited coming into the center and would practically run to his room with excitement, but recently has become aversive to entering the center. After weeks and weeks of my patient coming into the center upset with tantrums, separation issues and refusing to walk in independently and spending an hour in the hallway upon arrival, he now will walk into the center independently and to his room without engaging in any tantrums in the hallway and does not need any prompting. Baby steps quite literally into the right direction and getting back on the track to where we were. Thankful to be able to see progress and help my kiddo thrive.
